

Heavy Haul Trucking FAQs

What qualifies as a heavy haul load?

A load is considered “heavy haul” if it exceeds standard legal size or weight limits—typically over 80,000 lbs gross weight, 8.5 feet wide, 13.5 feet tall, or 53 feet long.

What types of equipment do you transport?

We haul everything from construction machinery and farm equipment to energy components, oilfield gear, and industrial machinery.

What states do you serve for heavy haul jobs?

We currently serve the entire Southeastern U.S., and we’re constantly expanding. Contact us for availability outside this region.

Do I need to get permits for heavy haul shipments?

No worries—we handle all necessary permits, escorts, and route planning to ensure compliance with state and federal regulations.

How far in advance should I schedule a heavy haul?

The earlier the better—especially for complex or multi-state routes. We recommend at least 3-5 business days’ notice, if possible.

Can you help with route planning?

Yes! We use specialized routing software and industry expertise to plan safe, legal, and efficient routes tailored to your load.

Do you provide pilot cars or escort vehicles?

Absolutely. We coordinate all necessary escort vehicles and follow state-specific requirements to keep your haul safe and compliant.

Is my heavy equipment insured during transport?

Yes, we carry comprehensive cargo insurance, and additional coverage can be arranged upon request.

What kind of trailers do you use for heavy hauls?

Our fleet includes lowboys, RGNs (Removable Goosenecks), step decks, and more—matched to the load for proper handling and safety.

How do you ensure safety during transport?

We follow strict DOT guidelines, conduct pre-trip inspections, and use securement practices that meet or exceed industry standards.

Express Freight FAQs

What qualifies as express freight?

Any shipment that is time-sensitive, including same-day, next-day, or expedited delivery needs.

Do you offer same-day delivery?

Yes! Depending on distance and availability, we offer same-day express freight options—just give us a call.

What types of freight can be shipped express?

We handle everything from small palletized shipments to high-priority industrial equipment.

Is there a size limit for express freight?

Express freight generally covers smaller or mid-sized loads, but we can customize solutions for urgent larger hauls too.

How do I get a quote for an express shipment?

You can call us directly or use our online quote form. We’ll get back to you quickly with a detailed estimate.

Can I track my express shipment?

Yes, we offer real-time tracking and regular updates so you always know where your freight is.

What areas do you cover with express freight?

We currently service the Southeastern U.S. but are flexible depending on urgency and logistics. Contact us to confirm availability.

What sets your express freight apart?

We offer fast turnaround, priority dispatching, and reliable drivers who understand the urgency of every express job.

Is express freight available 24/7?

Yes—our team is available around the clock to coordinate and dispatch time-sensitive shipments.

Can I schedule recurring express freight deliveries?

Absolutely. We offer customized recurring service plans for businesses with ongoing express freight needs.
